BONDED DEBT OF COUNTY LOW; ITS
FINANCES SOUND*Controller's Report Shows Healthy State of Affairs.*PAY OFF ALL BONDS IN 1915

Only four outstanding in that of $18,000 for Court House, balance of $225,000 which was let in 1890; Current Revenues are Now Ample.

A remarkable healthy condition of finances is shown by Fayette county in the annual report of Controller Harry Klinger, which is published today. The total outstanding bonds of the county amount to only $18,000 and this will be wiped out by 1915. This is all that remains of the $225,000 issue of 1890 for the construction of the present court house.

The resources of the county exceed the liabilities by $1,377,511. Indications are that the money on hand, and the current revenues, will enable the county to handle its improvement plan without issuing more bonds. Arrangements are being made to pay off the $18,000 bonds in 1915.

During the past few years the county has built the Point Marion office and purchased bridge at Connelville, and the new bridge at Point Marion, and repaired the Yellow Springs structure without issuing bonds.

Attorney John Phillips, counsel for Controller Klinger, presented the controller's report to the court, yesterday evening, and it was approved.

The liabilities total $23,128.24, and include the $18,000 outstanding court-house bonds and accounts payable of $5,128.24. The resources total $1,377,511.75, which makes an excess of resources of $1,354,383.51.

For the year ending June 30, 1913, the county has given a complete recapitulation showing the condition of each building. The courthouse and grounds cost $100,000, the furniture, fixtures, etc., of the courthouse $25,000, the county home and grounds $10,000, the jail $10,000, and with the furniture, fixtures, etc., of the jail $10,000, the total cost of the buildings and grounds is $145,000. The total cost of the furniture, fixtures, etc., of the buildings and grounds is $145,000. The total cost of the furniture, fixtures, etc., of the buildings and grounds is $145,000.

Yankee Bluejackets Land in Hayti; Quiet Restored After Night of Riot

By Associated Press.
PORT-AU-PRINCE, Hayti, Jan. 28.—Detachments of American sailors from U. S. S. Montana were on guard today at the American legation. German bluejackets, and marines were also on guard in the city. Large landings parties were sent ashore from the American and German war vessels yesterday when President Oreste fled for refuge to the German cruiser Yneta after fighting broke out in the streets of the capital.

VANDERBILT PARTY TAKEN OFF THEIR STRANDED YACHT

Duke and Duchess of Manchester Among Those Saved by Frencher; May Recover Vessel.

NEW YORK, Jan. 28.—Frederick W. Vanderbilt and party, among them the Duke and Duchess of Manchester, are on board the United Fruit steamer Almirante, leaving the Vanderbilt yacht Warrior stranded off the Columbia coast. Word to this effect was received here by the United Fruit Company from Captain W. H. Devan, commander of the Almirante.

In a wireless message via New Orleans, Captain Devan said: "The Vanderbilt and party, none the worse for mishap; Warrior caught on coral reef. Believe she can be saved."

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 28.—All during the night and early today, the wireless here was silent as to the fate of Frederick W. Vanderbilt's yacht Warrior, which went aground off the coast of Columbia. Operations of two companies here heard vessels in the Gulf of Mexico calling the Warrior, but not to answer. This was not considered significant, however, as the Warrior's apparatus has not sufficient power to communicate with stations that usually operate with New Orleans stations.

The only news obtained here was obtained from ships in the Gulf which said that the Warrior had gone aground and was reported to be in a dangerous condition.

SENATOR CULLOM DIES

Veteran Illinois Statesman Succumbs After Long Illness.

EX-SENATOR SHELBY M. CULLOM.

By Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.—Former Senator Shelby M. Cullom of Illinois died here today after an illness of more than a week during which he hovered between life and death. His last words were a wish that he might have lived to see the completion of the national memorial to Abraham Lincoln, who was his personal friend.

Mr. Cullom was born in 1829 in the Elk Springs Valley of Kentucky, during the administration of President Andrew Jackson.

MEAN THIEF ENTERS
HOUSE FROM CHURCH;
ROBS THE MINISTER

Rev. C. W. Winey Loses Valuables Worth $100 During Service.

While Service Is Being Held, Marauder Enters Basement of Church and Takes Into Adjoining Dwelling; Another Man Swipes Doctor's Tools.

While Rev. C. W. Winey, pastor of the United Methodist church, was conducting a revival service in the church last evening, a thief without respect for the church broke into the Winey home adjoining the church, and made off with money, jewelry and clothing valued at $100.

Adding insult to injury, the thief entered the house of the parsonage through the back door of the church, during the service of the sermon.

When Rev. and Mrs. Winey returned to their apartments after the service, they found the house topsy-turvy. All the goods had been taken from the house and everything overturned. A search showed that a good deal of cash, belonging to the minister had been stolen, together with a pocket and ring of Mrs. Winey, and a silver watch which was valued at $100.

The thief, who was a man of about 40 years of age, was particularly prized by the minister's wife, it having been a gift from her mother.

The thief went into the furnace room beneath the church and forced a door which leads into the kitchen of the house of Crawford avenue. He then gained access to all parts of the house, Rev. Winey and wife about from 7:30 until 9 o'clock, between which hours the robbery took place.

The work of another thief was discovered this morning when Sam Levy, a negro, came into the police station with a case containing several surgical instruments which he found on the vacant lot on South Water street, near the coal yard.

The instruments were found to be the property of Dr. J. P. McCormick from whose automobile they were stolen yesterday afternoon as it stood on Apple street. Those recovered were only part of those lost as Chief Butler went down after a thorough search found the remainder hidden in a pile of trash. The instruments were worth about $50, but the thief evidently threw them away after finding that it would be impossible to make money on them.

Taft Warns Younger Generation
Against Panaceas of Crankism

By Associated Press.
ALBANY, Jan. 28.—Former President W. H. Taft left today for Canada after visiting upon the members of the Yale Alumni Association here last night that the younger generation should be trained in political principles. "I don't like to be regarded as an old fogy," he said, "and I don't think I am. We are in a transitory period which in many ways represents a crisis. We also have made a great transition and the people are aroused. Such transitions, however, always give rise to an excess of claims and crankism and they always suggest things."

MID-YEAR EXAMS ON IN HIGH SCHOOL; 66
EXEMPT IN STUDIES

Percentage of 87 Is Required to Pass Without Examination; Seniors Make Best Showing, Juniors Poorest; New Teacher Ready to Take Up Work.

The annual mid-year examinations on work for the first half term were begun today in the high school and in the seventh and eighth grades. For some of the students it was the beginning of a holiday period, for those who were exempt in all studies did not have to report today, nor for the remainder of the week, and even those who have to take all or part of the examinations are excused from attendance during the time that the tests are not on.

The rivalry as to exemptions in all studies is very keen. A percentage of 87 being required to exempt a student. The percentage of exemptions in all studies was greatest among the seniors where 25 per cent will not have to take any of the examinations.

The freshmen third with 20 per cent, the sophomores third with 12 per cent, and the juniors fourth with 12 per cent. The junior year, however, is considered to be the hardest course. Sixty-six students were exempt in every study.

Mr. C. W. Winey, teacher of chemistry, taught his last day in the high school yesterday and E. C. McCall of Philadelphia, N. J., arrived today to take his place when the regular sessions are resumed next week.

Mr. Winey resigned to enter the service of the Agricultural Experiment Station of the state of Illinois. Mr. McCall will move his family to Connellville about Easter time.

The students exempt in every major study are as follows:

Seniors.
Dana Scatterfield, Catherine Foley, Emma Katherine, Kurt, Elizabeth Pendle, Louise Woods, Mary Belle, Josephine Anne, Mary Alice Atkins, Howard Taylor, Norman Vancant.

CITY BEAUTIFUL IS DETERMINED AIM OF COMMERCE CHAMBER

Directors Will Conduct Systematic Investigation of Scheme.

His Plan Would Cost $100 a Week If Adopted; Councilman Gans Talks on Tax Matters; Noon-Train Petitions Modified; Carr Favors Masonstown.

Important steps toward the realization of a better looking city and other matters of civic improvement were taken up by the board of directors of the Chamber of Commerce. At its meeting yesterday afternoon.

Chairman J. L. Gans, of a special committee appointed to look up ways and means toward achieving a city beautiful, reported having corresponded with several concerns that specialize in this kind of work. The most promising, he said, were the National Society for Broader Education, with headquarters at Carlisle, Pa., whose manager, Mr. Hemmingsway, proposes to come here and talk things over after inspecting the city, if the chamber will pay his expenses. The plan, if adopted, would cost about $100 a week, which would mean personal work by the manager and several assistants along various lines—school children and the women of town would be enlisted in the work and a list of men would be sent to the residents to see what they are succeeding at it.

The committee was authorized to have Mr. Hemmingsway come here, if the expense is not greater than $50, as it is believed that his suggestions, even if his plan is not adopted, will be worth a great deal.

At the suggestion of J. E. Angle, secretary was directed to communicate with the Keystone Glass Bottle Works of Uniontown, an industry employing about 200 persons, which is not satisfied with its location and looks with favor on Connellville as a prospective site. A committee of J. E. Angle, M. B. Byrnes and C. D. Mitchell was appointed to interview the proprietors of the company on the proposed change.

The three petitions authorized to be prepared at the last meeting and filed last week, for after considerable discussion it was decided to write to the Baltimore & Ohio transportation officials asking that a chair car, and a day coach be added to the noon express train and that it be operated for passenger traffic from here to Pittsburgh. This will be followed by a petition signed by frequent travelers in that direction and the citizens at large.

Councilman J. L. Gans, addressed the board briefly, on the subject of revised assessments and asked its co-operation in the proposed investigation of the Somers system, which a representative of the company will explain at a public meeting in the near future. He was assured that the Chamber of Commerce would do all in its power to assist.

Congressman Wooda N. Carr told the chamber in a letter that he still favors the Monaca-hela river valley as the location for the proposed site for the government's armor plate works, but suggested that all of the towns aspiring to this plant to get together and make the case a common one. He says he feels certain that he can get the plant located in Fayette county.

The satiric character of the meeting of December 8 and 12, when were rejected by the new board of directors E. A. Schooley had put in many hours of careful preparation on them, were submitted in revised form by the committee in expectation of objectionable minutes. It took an hour to read the first minutes, but the condensed version required but ten.

M. B. Byrnes was named a committee to ascertain prices on an advertising design to be used on the Chamber of Commerce stationery. It was pointed out that a plate of this kind might be loaned to business men for use on their stationery and much valuable advertising secured therefrom.

No action was taken on a proposition to endorse the Freeman's Convention, it being decided to wait until the arrangements assume shape after the meeting of the executive committee here on Saturday night.

SICK, SOUR STOMACH, INDIGESTION OR GAS.

Take "Pape's" Dispersin and in Five Minutes You'll Wonder What Became of Misery in Stomach.

Wonder what upset your stomach—what portion of the food did the damage do? Well, don't bother. If your stomach is in revolt, if sour, gassy and upset, and what you just ate has fermented into stubborn lumps, head dizziness and belch gases and acids and create undigested food; in each foot, tongue coated—just take a little Pape's Dispersin and in five minutes you wonder what became of the indigestion and distress.

Millions of men and women today know that it is needless to have a bad stomach. A little Dispersin occasionally keeps the digestive organ regulated and they eat their favorite foods without fear.

If your stomach doesn't take care of your blood limit without rebellion, if your food is a damage instead of a help, remember the quickest, surest, most harmless relief is Pape's Dispersin which costs only fifty cents for a large case at drug stores. It's truly wonderful—it digests food and sets things straight so gently and easily that it is really astonishing. Please, for your sake, don't go on and on with a weak, disordered stomach. It's so unnecessary.—Adv.

ECZEMA SPREAD ALL OVER FACE

Started From Rash. Itched and Burned. Caused Loss of Sleep. Used Cuticura Soap and Ointment. "Entirely Rid of Terrible Pest."

806 10th St. West Park, McKees Rocks, Pa.

"My eczema first started from a rash, then it spread all over my face. It later turned to scales and now it is a mass of scabs. I made scars where the scabs fell off, and itched and burned and in the summer caused loss of sleep. The eczema disfigured me while I lasted."

"I used cream, ointment, and different soaps but was not successful. It was about two years before I used Cuticura Soap and Ointment. In the morning when I got up I would wash my face with Cuticura Soap and when my face was good and dry I would put the Cuticura Ointment on. At noon time I would only apply the Cuticura Ointment at night, and before I went to bed I would do the same as in the morning. I bought two cakes of Cuticura Soap and two boxes of Cuticura Ointment and I am entirely rid of that terrible pest." (Signed) Miss Freda Wenzelburger, Apr. 15, 1913.

If you wish a skin clear of pimples, black heads and other annoying eruptions, hands soft and white, hair lustrous and glossy, and scalp free from dandruff and itching, begin to-day the regular use of Cuticura Soap for the toilet, bath and shampoo, assisted by occasional light applications of Cuticura Ointment. Sold everywhere. Sample of each mailed free, with 32-p. book. Address postcard "Cuticura, Dept. T, Boston."

Men who shave and shampoo with Cuticura Soap will find it best for skin and scalp.

AFTER FIVE YEARS

Winthrop Child Was Restored to Health by Vinol.

"Five years ago our little girl had a severe attack of diphtheria which left her subject to bronchitis and stomach trouble. She had been almost constantly under medical treatment. I had tried also two or three remedies containing cod liver oil but found her stomach rebelled against the oil. Reading your description of Vinol I decided to try it and did so with most astonishing results. I cannot begin to tell you how she has improved because you do not know what a little sufferer she was for five years. She has gained ten pounds since she commenced to take Vinol, and the story of what Vinol has done for her is only half told in this letter." Mrs. Adelaide Mulloy, Winthrop Mass.

Vinol contains all the healing curative properties of cod liver oil, without the oil and taste added. That is why it helped this little girl after other remedies had failed.

We ask mothers of weak, sickly children to try Vinol on our offer to give back your money if it fails to help them. Graham & Company, druggists, Conneltsville. Vinol is sold in the West Side by Fred H. Harmoning.

BROADWAY JONES

FROM THE PLAY OF
GEORGE M. COHAN

EDWARD MARSHALL
WITH PHOTOGRAPHS FROM SCENES IN THE PLAY

CHAPTER XII.

The celebration over the mill once more settled down to that industrial peace which is accompanied by the deafening roar of machinery, the clamor of the busy hammer on the mill, sinking home in pecking boxes, the shouts of workmen and women forced to thrust their words above the strident melody which surrounds them.

There was new life in the old mill, new confidence had taken place of fear and fierce antagonism in the hearts of hundreds, an esprit de corps had been born suddenly such as had not existed in that factory for many years. In one happy sentence of his baneful speech Broadway had struck a keynote. He had said:

"And—now, you fellows, keep your brains—er—busy with this situation. I have bucked the Trust. I've buck'd the Trust for you and the old town. Now if you don't help me out in the corner, stagger it, blind it, pulp it, put it down and out as the all-powerful force in the sun industry it's going to wipe me off the map, and when I'm wiped, you're wiped.

"I've fought for you, and lots of folks will say I am a fool for doing it. If you start in and fight for me; if we both fight heart and soul and night and day to win against the wildest competition that was ever known in chowin'-um, we WILL win. Anything else means our sponge in the air and a rail for doctors and an ambulance, or more likely, undertaker, for Jones' Popcorn Gum, its owner and the men who work for him."

These words had struck home. The workmen had all understood their truth, furthermore, they fully recognized the justice of the burden Broadway laid upon them. Workmen are fair, they are fairer in old, little towns like Jonesville than they are in great industrial centers, where the element of personality has passed out of industry and the worker is a cog, while the owner is an unseen and mysterious power. The men had shouted wildly that they all would help and meant it. After he had left the shops they had reiterated among themselves the pledge of their fealty, and they meant them.

Sweethearts, that day in the Jones plant, would have scornfully rejected sweethearts who showed any sign of treason to the young proprietor, for there would have threatened a son who answered at Broadway, no more would have chided daughters (more likely would have spanked them fiercely) who offered words upon what had occurred. The rapacity of mixers, cookers, drawers, molders, cutters, stack-ers, wrappers, packers, boxers, shippers increased as if by magic. For their hearts were in their work; they were hustling for the boss who had declared his firm intention of hustling for his workers.

Therefore in the works everything buzzed and hummed and banged and clattered with a pleasurable and contagious enthusiasm. In the office there was a warm glow of satisfaction, but Broadway's smile, after the ladies had departed, Clara and her mother to make calls and pass the joyful news about the town triumphantly, Josie to attend to necessary details of her duties, became somewhat weaker than it had been.

He had gone into the fight, but was he going to win the fight? It was due to fight, undoubtedly, but it would be painful to get licked. His knowledge of the business world was amply represented by the figure "0," and then another figure "0," the two preceded by the figure "1."

They knew 100 per cent of that game of which he knew absolutely nothing. He had defied them, shied his hat into the ring and now was obliged to chastise them drastically. He sighed, thrust his neck out stiffly and said, trying to be cocky, but, now that the excitement had died down realizing that it would be easy to be gloomy:

"Funny Pembroke isn't here."

He proposed to scorn that person he was keyed up to a mighty candle power of hot contempt, but he wanted to get at it, get it over with, before his energy had oozed away.

"He'll be along," said Wallace.

"He'll be along, yet?"

"Just."

Out came Broadway's neck again. He was even rather nervous. "What are we going to say to him when he gets here?"

"Remember that you promised to let me handle him," said Wallace warningly. "He thinks I'm your secretary."

The judge saw that they were worried. "If you boys want to talk things over I'll skip along."

"No, stay here, Judge," Broadway urged. "We may need a lawyer."

The judge's face glowed with his satisfaction.

"We're just waiting for Pembroke," said Wallace.

"Pembroke? Oh, yes; some of the men told me that he is in town. What's he coming here for?"

"To try to give us a whole lot of money," Wallace answered. "But we're not going to take it." He grinned up at Broadway. "We don't need it, do we?"

Jackson looked at him with mournful eyes, recollecting all the bills he had left behind in New York city. "Don't make me laugh. I didn't sleep well."

The judge saw his young friend's increasing discomfort. "You've made the people of this town very happy today, my boy. You ought to sleep well after this. They owe you a great debt."

Jackson passed the compliment, but winced. "Please don't talk about debts! Let's get on a cheerful subject." With a sickly effort to relieve his mind he turned to Wallace. "How's the bar?"

The judge seized this opportunity to extol a local genius. "Ain't he a nice fellow, though?"

"Yes," said Wallace dryly, "he cut Tat's hair once."

"I shouldn't be surprised," the judge answered heartily. "He's from Hartford."

His remarkable appreciation of the dignity and glories of the little cities was a continual joy to the two friends, who smiled across his nodding head at one another.

Wallace looked around appreciatively. "The old gentleman had pretty nice offices here."

"Yes," the judge agreed. He nodded toward the desk at which Broadway had carefully taken his position. "Seems strange not to see him sitting at that desk." He sighed. "First, old Oscar Jones sat there, and he died; then John sat there, and he died; then Andrew sat there, and he died; now—"

Broadway, who had listened to the brief but tragical recital with expanding orbs, got up, and, as he edged away from the too fatal place of office furniture, eyed it with suspicion and distaste. "That's the last time I'll sit there," he declared.

But Judge Spotswood had not seen the byplay and did not hear the youth's resolve. He was launched on reminiscence. "Every man in the plant loved the old gentleman. They all feel mighty bad. Just think—he was alive 72 hours ago, and now the whole town's in mourning!"

It was at this juncture that Higgins, a new and happy Higgins, entered, cap in hand, respectfully. He was smiling genially. "Excuse me, Mr. Jones, the men want to know if you have any objection to their celebrating tonight."

He bowed respectfully to Josie, who entered at that moment.

"They're thinking of having a torch-light parade and fireworks in honor of your taking up things at the works. Is it all right?"

The judge beamed happily. What could be more significant of the new day which had dawned on Jonesville than this speech from Higgins, erstwhile the dissatisfied, the complainer? "That's a bully idea!" he exclaimed enthusiastically.

Wallace and Jackson looked at one another in a pleased appreciation. It was Josie who instinctively saw the flaw which had escaped the border of workmen in the shops and which now escaped the four there in the office. "Why, Judge!" said she, shocked and scandalized.

"What's the matter?"

But Josie would not even look at him. In a reproachful voice she turned to Higgins. "Tell the men to do nothing of the kind," she said with emphasis. "Don't they realize what has happened? How can they forget so quickly?"

Now a light burst, even upon Higgins. "Oh, that's so, I'll have to remind them of that!"

Wallace was still puzzled, but Broadway was beginning to understand.

"By George," said the judge, "I forgot all about it myself!"

A bright light bursting upon Wallace, he went to Jones and slapped him on the back. "The king is dead," he quoted, "long live the king!"

Jackson winced. He reflected that this showed the gratitude, the cherishing regard of the workmen. His uncle had just gone to his reward and now, because he, the heir, in a moment of decent impulse, had done the square thing by them, the faithful laborers were quite content to follow their old friend's obsequies by torch-lights borne in glory to the new one while brass bands played ragtime!

Josie bit her lip, the correspondence with the Empire Advertising Agency and now she the letters she had found to Wallace.

He looked at them, frowned, shook his head and bit his lip, very much astonished, very much annoyed. "It's the Empire, all right," he was forced to admit. But before he had a chance to read the letters, Sam came in, tramping like a little elephant, threw back his massive head, half closed his eyes and roared:

"Mr.—Pembroke—and—Mr.—Leary—to—see—Mr.—Jones."

"Tell them to come right in," said Broadway. His neck thrust this way and that—two thrusts in honor of big business.

Wallace smiled. "Judge," he said, "did you ever see a man refuse to take a million and a half?"

"Not yet."

"Well, watch the little professor, over there." He nodded toward Broadway. Then, to the man of whom he had been speaking: "Sit at that desk and look business-like."

"In that chair?" asked Broadway with determination. "Not after what he said! And then he sat there, and he died! No, I'll be standing up."

"Shall I go?" asked Josie.

"No, please don't."

Then Pembroke entered, trailed by a sallow person, young in years, old in expression, and bearing in his hand a new stenographer's notebook and a little group of finely sharpened pencils, which he carried as if they might have been small, very deadly weapons, to be used in time of need upon his master's enemies.

"How do you do, Mr. Pembroke," said Broadway with what he conceived to be great dignity.

"Mr. Jones," said Pembroke, bowing formally.

Broadway waved him to the fatal chair. "Sit right down here," he urged.

"No, thank you," Pembroke countered.

"He's on!" Broadway whispered to Wallace.

Gravely Pembroke bowed to all the others of the party, murmuring, as he did so, their names. But as he bowed to Wallace he said "Wilson."

"Wilson?" said the judge and Josie in astonishment and concert.

Hob winked at them. "Yes; that's right," he blazed. "That's my name."

This over, Pembroke turned to his stenographer, who had found a seat upon an office stool. "Take the entire conversation, John," he directed.

This teased Broadway for an instant but he recovered quickly. Was he to be outdone by this emissary of the Gum Trust in presenting evidences of suspicion? Not if he, Broadway Jones, was kept informed of what was going on, he wasn't. He pointed to a youth whom he had seen about the office frequently, and asked Josie: "Stenographer, is he?"

She nodded.

"What's his name?" asked Broadway, in a whisper.

"Henry."

Broadway was content. With a grand air and several protrusions of the neck, he ordered: "Take the entire conversation, Henry!" Outdone by anyone like Pembroke? He thought not!

"Are we to talk in the presence of all here?" asked Pembroke calmly, coldly, disapprovingly. He was very cautious.

"I'm satisfied, if you are," Broadway answered. "Sit down, Judge."

"Very well, Mr. Jones," said Pembroke gravely. "Mr. Jones, I am not in the habit of doing business through

"We're Not Going to Sell. We're Going to Fight."

He cast a scornful glance at Wallace, who smiled sweetly in return. "Your Mr. Wilson, your secretary as he represents himself to be, and whose impertinence, by the way, is beyond description, has had the audacity to state that I should have to do business through him or not at all."

"Those were my instructions," Jackson answered, never wavering.

"I should like to understand the reason for so unusual an arrangement."

"Well," said Jackson, "you want to buy something that I own. He's the salesman, that's all." He paused, wondering at his own great brilliance. "John Wasmaker owns a store, but he doesn't wait on the customers, does he?"

This was unanswerable. It dumfounded Pembroke; it delighted all the other hearers, saving only the two secretaries, who were bent above their tasks with nervous diligence.

Broadway himself laughed outright. "How was that?" he asked Wallace in a whisper.

"You're immense, on the square," said Wallace, with intense appreciation.

Pembroke was not thus impressed. He was offended. He was evidently ready for offence from any quarter.

"You're a flippant, sir," he said with a grave scowl. "You gave me your word that the deal would be consummated at two o'clock, yesterday afternoon. The price was settled and I agreed upon by both of us."

Jackson sat in silence regarding averting at disconcert.

"I returned by air to your my law, ign, and upon inquiring from an insolent butler as to your whereabouts I received the information that you were on your way to Egypt."

"Good old Hankin!" muttered Broadway, and decided, then and there, to raise his butler's wages once more.

"He said the only word that you had left far me was a profane request that I go to—er—well, we'll not repeat it."

"I'll make that raise a twenty, not a ten," Broadway reflected.

"Believing you to be a man of integrity," Pembroke went on, "unfortunately for me I had no witnesses present at our closing of the bargain."

Broadway continued to smile expansively.

"Still," said Pembroke, "I ask you, as man to man, is your word worthless?"

Broadway looked at him with an intensity of gaze which required three stretchings of the neck to bring about. "When I'm doing business with unscrupulous people, yes," he answered.

Pembroke, shuddering, turned to his stenographer. "Have you got that, John?" And John nodded.

"Got that, Henry?" Broadway demanded of his man. And Henry nodded.

Then Broadway walked the floor, keeping the astonished Pembroke fixed with a glittering eye. That careful, able, very modern business person was rather notably surprised by the young man. Somehow he seemed to have developed since the hour, so short a time before, when first he had encountered him in New York city.

"When I fell for your ruck football business methods yesterday and agreed to sell," said Broadway, his voice assuming an extraordinary sing-song, to his friends unusual, to himself astonishing, to Pembroke disconcerting and, in later years, a celebrated thing, "I wasn't aware of the low, contemptible tricks to which your company had stooped in order to put my poor old uncle out of business."

His voice thrilled with feeling when he used those touching words "my poor old uncle." His "poor old uncle" would have been emphatically surprised had he been there to hear that thrill.

"I didn't know it was the result of the business blows you'd dealt him that sent him to his grave—(I am endeavoring, by means of hyphens, to indicate the lingering, scathing emphasis which Broadway, this day saturated in the soul of oratory, was giving now to certain words.) 'I didn't know it was the purpose of the concern with which I was dealing to throw out of work hundreds of men that owed to that thing I was selling their very means of livelihood, food for their babies, education for their growing sons and daughters.'"

Even Wallace looked at him amazed. The tremolo, the emphasis, the feeling which Broadway was putting into this extraordinary line of talk to the trust agent were all new and beautiful to him.

"Lots of things I didn't know yesterday, Mr. Pembroke," said the young man in conclusion, "but I've found them out since then, and that is why I've broken my word."

Pembroke's impassiveness was ruffled; there was not the slightest doubt of that.

On Josie's face there was a look of admiration which was balm to Broadway's soul; the judge had listened with a mouth continually opening wider; Wallace was frankly triumphant.

"You didn't think that I could talk that way, did you?" asked Broadway of his adversary. Then, to Wallace: "How was it?"

"Great!"

"Great!" said Jackson. "It was wonderful! I never knew it was in me." He was completely satisfied with Broadway Jones. He whirled again on Pembroke. "Go on, say something else."

But Pembroke kept a stony silence. "Tell you what I'll do," cried Broadway, "I'll talk you for a thousand dollars a side."

Pembroke scorned this proposition. Plainly he was not a sport. "Then I am to understand the price is—"

"The salesman will state the price. I'm the owner."

"I don't consider any commercial trade-mark worth a million and a half of dollars," Pembroke said with emphasis.

"Neither do I," said Wallace cheerfully.
